

ABOUT COMMUNITY RIGHTS COUNSEL AND THE CALIFORNIA COMMUNITY LAND USE PROJECT

Community Rights Counsel (“CRC”) is a nonprofit, public interest law firm based in Washington, D.C. Established in 1997, CRC helps local communities defend against legal challenges to land use controls and other community protections, particularly challenges brought under the Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment. CRC conducts litigation workshops for municipal attorneys, furnishes amicus support to local governments, and in critical cases provides municipalities reduced-fee or free legal counsel. CRC’s contributions to this Handbook are based in part on papers delivered at its first litigation workshop, and CRC will use this Handbook as a textbook in future workshops. CRC began as a project of the International City/County Management Association, a national association representing more than 8,000 city and county managers. For more information about CRC, call us at (202) 296-6889; email us at crc@communityrights.org; write us at 1726 M Street NW, Suite 703, Washington, D.C. 20036; or visit our webpage at www.communityrights.org.

The California Community Land Use Project (“the CCLUP”) is a special project of the Institute for Local Self Government, the non-profit research arm of the League of California Cities. The Institute was founded in 1955 as an educational organization to promote and strengthen the processes of local self government. Established in 1998, the CCLUP provides assistance to local agency officials on land use matters in California, with a focus on regulatory takings. Its contributions to this Handbook are an element of the CCLUP’s education work program. In addition, the CCLUP provides information services and, in some circumstances, legal support for local agencies in this important area of the law. The CCLUP is fortunate to have a distinguished advisory panel of attorneys and others interested in planning matters. The CCLUP receives generous support from the Packard Foundation. For more information about the CCLUP, call us at (916) 658-8200; write us at the Institute for Local Self Government,
